Genevieve Felix Reynolds: Logic

'The tightly-choreographed paintings of Sydney-based artist Genevieve Felix Reynolds hatch multi-layered dialogues between classicism and contemporaneity; materiality and digitisation. Representational fragments of ancient artefacts are set within non-objective, geometric frameworks, conjuring complex new conceptualisations of space.'

Arts writer Elli Walsh interviews the artist in our September issue.

Julian Meagher: Tidelines

'I spent many days painting watercolours in the sand dunes of Bithry Inlet as the tides ran in and out. The solitude and forced simplicity (and being out of mobile range) was welcome.' – Julian Meagher
